ARTISTIC DIRECTOR'S NOTES

Nureyev's Eyes has been on my list of shows to do for a few years. When I discovered the play, I was surprised it had not been done in Maine before. With the place the Wyeth family holds in Maine's history, it seemed like such a natural fit for a theater in Maine.

Andrew and Jamie Wyeth spent many hours painting in my great-grandparents barn in Cushing, Maine. As a child, I remember watching them paint. It was a significant moment.

As I was putting together this season, there was the perfect place for Nureyev's Eyes. The contract was signed, and the play became part of our 20th anniversary celebration.

James Hoban has been a regular at Good Theater for over a decade. He delivers consistently excellent performances on our stage, and last season we co-directed Jane Austen's Lady Susan. I knew he would be the perfect director for this show.

He ran with the project. In addition to directing the play, he designed the stunning set and the moody sound design. Our technical director, Craig Robinson, coordinated the creation of the set, so Steve and I were able to focus on the many other projects we've had this winter. - Crimes of the Heart, The High Road and Killer Comfort, plus You Can't Take It With You which starts rehearsals at the beginning of March.

I watched a run through of the play a few days before opening. I sat there enjoying some very good theater with a smile on my face, feeling so grateful for Good Theater. A place where the right team comes together to make art that lives and sometimes dances!

- Brian P. Allen, Executive & Artistic Director

DIRECTOR'S NOTES

History is replete with artist/muse relationships. More rare is an artistic collaboration of this nature that develops into a friendship in full. Such is the story of Jamie Wyeth and Rudolph Nureyev. What began as a mutual interest between subject and interpreter in 1974 grew and deepened into an enduring bond; one that would continue to inspire Wyeth long after Nureyev's passing in 1993.

I do not dance (mercifully, for all concerned) yet I am fascinated by dance, both classical and modern. I know it is a language being spoken in movement, a language I will never speak but am drawn to nonetheless. I want to get closer to it, even though I know I will never completely understand it. I am simply fascinated. I believe such a fascination was at the heart of the relationship between Nureyev and Wyeth; a desire to get closer and closer to the art and soul of the other man. Could either man ever fully comprehend the mystery of the other? Of course not. No one can. It's not about that. It's about the journey, the desire, the fascination. Closer and closer.

- James Noel Hoban, Director

Joe Bearor (Jamie Wyeth) is so happy to be returning to the Good Theater stage. Previous work with the company includes Jane Austen's Lady Susan, Murderers, Shear Madness, and Next Fall. A lifetime ago, he spent some time in Los Angeles, where he starred in the miniseries Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.: Double Agent and the John Lennon biopic, Rubber Soul, which premiered at 2014's SXSW Film Festival. Since returning to Portland, his stage credits include the Dramatic Repertory Company's production of Venus in Fur, Outside Mullingar with the American Irish Repertory Ensemble, and Sean Mewshaw's production of True West at SPACE Gallery. Finally, Joe has appeared in Straight White Men, Radiant Vermin, Home Free, and Six Degrees of Separation at Mad Horse Theatre, where he is a company member. Joe thanks his friends and family--most especially his wife, Colleen--for their rowdy support and unrelenting goodness. Said family is expected to grow any day now with the arrival of his first born. Therefore, he does apologize if he finds himself having to rush off to the hospital sometime during Act II! Enjoy the show, dear reader!

Michael Grew (he/him) (Rudolph Nureyev) recently made his Portland debut at Portland Stage, in their production of Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure. A lover of new play development, Michael is a lifetime member artist of New York City's celebrated Ensemble Studio Theatre. He has also performed with the Shakespeare Theatre (Mrs. Warren's Profession), Signature Theatre (Les Miserables), Kennedy Center (The Brand New Kid), and Folger Theatre (As You Like It). On TV, Michael was last seen leading an episode of the History Channel's The Food That Built America. Eternal love and gratitude to wife, Kel! www.michaelgrew.com

Iain Odlin (Lighting Design) went to an audition in 1986. As he arrived, an angry man stormed out of the theater past him.
